

Compounding Provides Medication Customized for Each Patient's Needs

Compounding can be the answer when your doctor prescribes you specialized medicine and the approved manufactured drug is not an option to fit your specific needs. Many brand-manufactured medications contain allergic chemicals and/or are limited in their strength, taste, or route of administration, so they may fail to meet the needs of all patients.

Compounding Versus Commercial Medication

A patient may be unable to use commercial drugs for a variety of reasons: They may have an allergy to one or more of a commercial drug's ingredients, the required dosage is not readily available or manufacturers do not produce drugs for certain health conditions. Compounding can be the solution. Skilled pharmacists can custom-blend the right medication and dosage for an effective treatment. This can alleviate any unwanted side effects, and tailor the medication to your requested or specific needs.
